Autumn 1, Week 1, Lesson 1

The Bright Sail at Sunset

Sounds to Spot

s, a, t, p, ai, ee, igh, oa

Today's Words

sunset, sail, sheep, bright, road

Word Parts

sun-set, sail, sheep, bright, road

Read the Sentences

The sail is bright.
We can see the road at sunset.

Read the Story

At sunset, Pip stood on the salty path and pointed at the sea. "Look!" he whispered. "That sail is as bright as a lamp."
On the hill, a sheep sat down with a soft plop and stared too, chewing as if it had all the time in the world.
The road curled beside the path, and the sky glowed orange, pink and gold around the bright sail.

Back to the Market Corner

Sounds to Spot

ar, or, un-, re-

Today's Words

market, corner, unpack, return

Read the Sentences

We unpack at the market.
I return to the corner.

Read the Story

The next morning, Pip returned to the market corner with the bright sail still in his head.
"If that boat comes back at sunset," he said, patting the cart, "we'll need a proper picnic to watch it."
He unpacked corn, napkins and a little bag that bumped against his knees. A sharp fork poked out from behind the bags, looking far too proud of itself.
The market buzzed with voices, bells and warm bread smells, but Pip grinned. He had found the perfect corner for getting ready.

Read the Sentences

The rabbit is on the picnic rug.
A magnet is in the napkin bag.

Read the Story

By sunset, Pip had carried the market bag back to the grassy path by the sea.
"If the bright sail comes back, we'll be ready," he said, spreading the picnic rug with a proud little flick.
He put the napkin bag in the middle, but a small rabbit had already crept close with one paw on the corner.
"No nibbling yet," Pip whispered.
The rabbit twitched its nose, peeked inside the bag, and found the shiny magnet stuck to a spoon with a tiny clink.
Pip laughed so hard the napkins wobbled. The sky turned gold, the rug felt warm under his knees, and waiting for the sail suddenly seemed fantastic.
